If we want to create a space that welcomes the soul, we must speak our own truth to the center of the circle and listen receptively as others speak theirs.

Dominican Retreat (co-sponsor with the Shalem Institute)
7103 Old Dominion Drive, McLean, VA

Cost: $325 for the entire program; $100 for January session only

Leader: Leah Rampy

You're a leader. You spend time thinking about and supporting others. Things move at a rapid pace; sometimes chaos feels like the norm.

How do you ground yourself in the midst of this turbulence? How do you connect with the Spirit in a world where you hardly have time to breathe? How can you connect your sense of call to the way you're living in the world? Where is God in all this?

In this four-session program, you'll come together with others who face similar challenges as well as the desire for a deeper connection to the Holy. We'll begin with a facilitated session to clarify and practice our process. We'll continue our sessions with deep listening-to each other and to where God is working within and among us.

Leaders from all types of organizations and from all faith traditions are welcome. You may register for the entire four sessions. Or if you're unsure, come to the first session and decide if you want to continue this journey. Please note, however, that if you decide to do all four sessions, we ask that you give priority to your presence at each meeting.

Leah Rampy, Ph.D., is a graduate of Shalem's Personal Spiritual Deepening Program, a Presbyterian layperson, and a frequent retreat leader. She is a certified executive coach and leadership consultant and has worked with numerous executives in organizations of all sizes.
